Hansen Lee is no stranger to the entertainment industry in Malaysia and South East Asia. Since appearing on the scene back in 2006, his career has taken him through every extent the industry has to offer: Modeling, radio deejay, morning TV talk show host, Reality Game shows, actor, emcee, voice over talent. The Seremban native had honed his skillsets through all these various mediums.

For four years, he was one of the faces that greeted Malaysia every morning on NTV7's The Breakfast Show. His natural ability to communicate with people coupled with his boyish charm connected with the audience instantly, which was definitely one of the factors Malaysians tuned in daily.

The years to follow just saw more and more opportunities for Hansen. He got his first opportunity to host on a regional level by guest hosting an episode of E! News on E channel. As a host, he has interviewed many personalities including Michael Schumacher, Tan Sri Tony Fernandes, Hoobertank and Edward James Olmos. His professionalism, charisma, ability to command a crowd and of course, towering 6'1" stature has also made him a sought after emcee for functions and events.

In 2007, Hansen caught the acting bug after attending an acting course with the National Institute of Dramatic Arts (NIDA) from Australia. It was then that the 6'1" tall budding actor looked beyond the shores of Malaysia to pursue an acting career. In 2009, Singapore provided the opportunity to do just that as he was immediately casted for Channel 5 hit series, titled Polo Boys followed by a French TV series, Déjà vu, where filming took place in Danang, Vietnam.

More roles came his way from both sides of the causeway, which kept Hansen busy until 2012 when he decided to take his acting skills to new heights by attending an intensive summer course at William Esper Studio in New York and saw his first foray into feature film with "Gila Baby" and "Bullet over Petaling Street", both went to cinemas in 2014. It is worth noting that "Gila Baby" won best film, director, screenplay, actor and actress at the Anugerah Lawak Warna 2015.

In 2014, Hansen was called back to Singapore once again to join FOX SPORTS ASIA as a host for FOX SPORTS CENTRAL. During his stint there, the Malaysian was also asked to host a fitness show called "Sister HIIT", a half hour fitness program for Fox Fit. It was then that Hansen had an epiphany. He had finally been able to merge 2 of his greatest passions in life for his career: Fitness and presenting. The former personal trainer, who is also a certified yoga teacher, realized that this was the best way to share his personal journey, in hopes to inspire to embrace a healthier and active lifestyle.

Moving forward, Hansen has currently relocated back to Kuala Lumpur to further establish himself in the health and fitness industry: Teaching classes on movement and yoga, organizing workshops and attending any talks that relates to his passion, while still juggling all the emcee and TV hosting jobs that comes his way. Most recently, you can catch Hansen hosting an episode of Discovery Channel's "Incredible Engineering Blunders: Fixed", that is being aired across the world.
